HSA Enrollment Posts Double-Digit Growth

According to a new report by America's Health Insurance Plans (AHIP), health savings accounts (HSAs) continue to rise in popularity, experiencing double-digit growth over last year. According to AHIP, nearly 17.4 million Americans are covered by HSA-eligible insurance plans, an increase of nearly 12% since 2013. Most enrollment gains in the HSA space in 2014 were in the large group market. The share of HSA lives enrolled in large group plans jumped from 59% in January 2012 to 68% in January 2013, to 74% in January 2014. AHIP has tracked the number of people covered by HSA plans since 2004 when Congress first authorized the model. Total enrollment in HSA plans has grown, on average, 15% annually since 2011.

The AHIP also reported that:

- Nationally, the average monthly premium was $371 for single coverage and $835 for families
- About half (52%) of all HSA enrollees in the individual market (including dependents covered under family plans) were age 40 or over; 48% were under age 40.
- The gender distribution of people covered by an HSA as of January 2014 was evenly split – 50% male and 50% female.
- States with the highest levels of HSA enrollment were: Illinois (1,054,916), Texas (1,042,642), Ohio (802,511), Pennsylvania (691,750) and Michigan (690,932).
